

Open Access Policy

The African Journal of Reproductive Health (AJRH) is an open access, peer-reviewed journal published by the Women's Health and Action Research Centre (WHARC).

AJRH provides immediate and unrestricted online access to all published scholarly articles. Readers may access, read, download and use the published articles without subscription or registration.

There is no embargo period for access to published articles.

AJRH supports the dissemination and advancement of knowledge in reproductive health by making its scholarly content freely available to researchers, health professionals, policymakers, educators, students and other interested users worldwide.

Open access to AJRH articles does not remove the requirement to acknowledge the original authors and source when the published material is reused.

The copyright and licensing terms applicable to each article are clearly stated on the journal website and in the published article.

AJRH does not operate a subscription-only or hybrid access model for its scholarly research articles.